Ed Reggi is owner and founder of Paper Slip Theater and has been a teacher of Improv in St. Louis since 1993.
He teaches Improv to professional actors as well as workshops for high school and community groups.

A student of the Spolin Method of Improvational Acting, Ed is one of the most sought after teachers of the Spolin method. He has taught at the New York Center of Creative Arts (COCA), City Improv and festivals and workshops across the country.

He is a graduate of Second City in Chicago, has an Emmy for his voice over work and has worked with a wide range of theaters and theater art groups in New York and throughout the mid-west. The "St. Louis Improv Project" grew into the Paper Slip Theater with Ed inviting the best students who wanted to continue practicing their craft to join him in entertaining crowds throughout the St. Louis area.
